

Guide to Learn “der, die, das”

Most of my students who learned German before they started learning with me, tell me that the biggest problem they have is to remember “der, die, das”. Therefore I have written this guide with tips how to learn “der, die, das” successfully and included a list of almost 300 frequent nouns so you can get started right away.

Who is this guide for?

This guide is good for you if you are fairly new to learning German, but you have at least basic idea of the pronunciation. If you are a total beginner – watch out, I will have a video that goes with this guide soon, as well as an article about the German pronunciation and a video to go with it. If you sign up for notifications you will be informed as soon as they are ready.

If you are more advanced the tips can still be helpful to you.

What is “der, die, das” Anyway?

In case you are not fully certain what this “der, die, das” is about, here is a short summary: In German all nouns (words that describe objects, people, places, things – like “tree”, “love”, etc.) fall into one of three categories. They are considered male, female or neutral. There is no real logic behind this.

“Der” is the male form, “die” the female and “das” the neutral form.

When you use them, for example saying “das Buch” (the book), it means you are talking about a specific book, not just any.

If your native language also has articles, you will be familiar with the idea.

Are they that Important?

To be frank, it is really not the end of the world if you make mistakes about the correct articles and it is going to happen. In my experience there can be way too much attention on this point. Using the correct article is not more important than being able to communicate at all! Of course you will make mistakes – but if you keep going, your German is going to improve and you will make less and less mistakes.

Why Learn them?

Well, in order to speak correct German, you will have to learn them and while you should not be overly critical if you do not manage to remember all of them perfectly right away, it does make sense to learn them from the beginning, as it is easier than trying to start learning them later.

But How Can I Actually Learn them?

So here is how you can fairly easy learn new words, including their articles. In order to get you started, I have included a list of about 300 important German nouns – sorted by subject and alphabetically if you want to find something.

Included is the most common meaning in English. You can however also use any other nouns. This is for example a good resource of short videos with German words.

- Take a list of maybe up to 10-15 words at a time. Best is, you write them up (or copy them) in your own exercise book.
- Make sure you know what each word means.
- If you are using a video or have someone that can help you, repeat each of the word with the article a couple of times.
- And now the one step that will help you to actually remember the word, and much more important, use it: Use every one of the words in a few sentences. If you are a total beginner you can use your native language for everything else.

Here is an example of making sentences with “das Buch” (the book):

“Das Buch is big. Das Buch is interesting. Das Buch is on the table. Das Buch has a red cover. Das Buch was very good. Etc.”

If you know a bit of German, use as much German as you can. Don’t worry about the Grammar, besides using the correct article.

Was this helpful to you?
